Welcome to Rights in Action:

The LINKAGES project is pleased to host its annual Rights in Action event, convened in recognition of World AIDS Day and International Human Rights Day, to highlight global advancements in science, policy, and practice related to HIV and key populations.

Today's meeting will:

1. Raise awareness of the ethical and safety concerns associated with the collection and public release of key population data
2. Describe efforts underway to improve the transparency and availability of data pertaining to key populations while minimizing risk to and protecting the rights of members of key population communities
3. Advance understanding of how data collection and use can empower key populations, lead to better quality programs, and support access to services at scale
4. Invite provocative discussion and promote knowledge sharing among partners engaged in key population research, monitoring and evaluation, advocacy, and program implementation
